

from

Facing the Lion

by Joseph Lekuton

Point of view is who tells the story.

One of the problems the nomads have with school is that we move our villages and the cattle, but the school stays in one place. That means leaving the children behind. The first year, my village was near the school, and I was able to go home easily. In my second year, the missionaries built a dormitory and started a boarding school. My family could move wherever they wanted to, and I could stay in school.

▲ Mission school

Definition ↓

Underline the clue words that show the point of view.

Point of View

from

Facing the Lion

by Joseph Lekuton

Point of view is who tells the story.

One of the problems the nomads have with school is that we move our villages and the cattle, but the school stays in one place.

That means leaving the children behind.

The first year, my village was near the school, and I was able to go home easily. In my second year, the missionaries built a dormitory and started a boarding school. My family could move wherever they wanted to, and I could stay in school.

▲ Mission school

A subject is the person about whom a biography or an autobiography is written.

Definition ↓

the point of view.

Point of View

Boy Between Two Cultures

by Olivia Hodgson

Because the Lekutons were nomads, their children faced special problems attending school. Nomads move around, but schools remain in the same place. During most of his school years, Joseph lived in a boarding school that missionaries had built. What a different life he had there! He bravely stayed behind at school when his family left.

▲
students in Rwanda, Africa

Underline the clue words that show the point of view.

Point of View

Boy Between Two Cultures

by Olivia Hodgson

Because the Lekutons were nomads, their children faced special problems attending school. Nomads move around, but schools remain in the same place. During most of his school years, Joseph lived in a boarding school that missionaries had built. What a different life he had there! He bravely stayed behind at school when his family left.

▲
students in Rwanda, Africa

Underline the clue words that show the point of view.

Point of View

from
Facing the Lion

One of the problems the nomads have with school is that we move our villages and the cattle, but the school stays in one place. That means leaving the children behind. The first year, my village was near the school, and I was able to go home easily. In my second year, the missionaries built a dormitory and started a boarding school. My family could move wherever they wanted to, and I could stay in school.

Boy Between Two Cultures

Because the Lekutons were nomads, their children faced special problems attending school. Nomads move around, but schools remain in the same place. During most of his school years, Joseph lived in a boarding school that missionaries had built. What a different life he had there! He bravely stayed behind at school when his family left.

Highlight how each narrator views the same events.

from Facing the Lion

One of the problems the nomads have with school is that we move our villages and the cattle, but the school stays in one place. That means leaving the children behind. The first year, my village was near the school, and I was able to go home easily. In my second year, the missionaries built a dormitory and started a boarding school. My family could move wherever they wanted to, and I could stay in school.

Boy Between Two Cultures

Because the Lekutons were nomads, their children faced special problems attending school. Nomads move around, but schools remain in the same place. During most of his school years, Joseph lived in a boarding school that missionaries had built. What a different life he had there! He bravely stayed behind at school when his family left.

Highlight how each narrator views the same events.

Events